WATSON'S BILL FOR THE FARMER

Congressman is Working to Have Legislation and Needed Office Created

LAUDED BY PUBLICATION

Farmers of Indiana Appreciate the Effort of Sixth District Representative

Probably no bill passed by Congress in the past twenty years is as beneficial to the farming community as the one introduced by Congressman Watson at the last session to appoint a Government Grain Inspector. Mr. Watson has declared his intention of working for its passage.

Over seven hundred million bushels of wheat raised in this country, is subject to inspection. If passed as No. 2 at place of purchase and then subjected to inspection by some tricky buyer and graded as No. 3, produces a loss of from one-half to one per cent per bushel. This may mean a loss of from eighty to one hundred millions dollars on that cereal to our farmers; an item worth guarding against.

With a government inspector stamping his finding, the grade passes for sale in all markets.

This is one of the strong contentions of the National American Society of Equity. Their official organ, a non-partisan paper, "The Up-to-Date Farmer," has the following to say of Watson, our Congressman:

"I am for men!" declared the renowned Henry George, in speaking of men and money, and the words thrilled the vast audience to which he was speaking. We may say the same thing in speaking of men and political parties. Up-to-Date Farming is in no sense partisan, and we view men as men and not for politicians; we support and honor them for the good things they do, not for the party to which they may belong.

"Congressman Watson of this State is one to whom we are glad to refer in this way. In his efforts in Congress he has been distinctly for the people. He has a bill now pending, and of which we shall say more later, that is a measure which peculiarly commends itself, and which we hope he may have the gratification of seeing made a law."

THE WEATHER

Fair tonight and Saturday. Warmer Saturday.

WHEN SHE PROMISED THE PARSON THAT SHE WOULD

Send Samples of the Dress in Which She Stood in Idaho

A number of friends of Mrs. Ben Case Edwards, nee Anna Blake Cunningham, formerly primary teacher in the city schools, have received a unique notice of her wedding which occurred in Burley, Idaho, on October 30th. Accompanying a piece of her wedding gown attached to a card appeared the thought: "This is the gown in which she stood, when she promised the parson that she would." The dress goods came from Manila, P. I., a product of the islands, and was sent by the groom's brother.

NARROW ESCAPE OF WILL FELTS

Furniture Worker Almost Met Instant Death by Electrocution

RECEIVED 2300 VOLTS

Private Phone Wire Fell Across
I. & C. Trolley During Strong Gale

Will Felts, an employee of the Park furniture factory, had 2300 volts of electricity sent through his system yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock at the factory, and sustained painful injuries to his hands.

Running between the Park and Innis-Pearce & Co. factories is a private telephone wire, and it was while Mr. Felts was making a call that he received the shock. The wire had blown down during the gale of the previous night, and fell across the I. & C. trolley wire on Seventh street.

Felts had just taken hold of the receiver on the private line and reaching over to lean on the automatic phone nearby he formed a circuit and received the full force of the shock which sent him reeling across the room, and he fell heavily on the floor. The flesh on his fingers, where he had hold of the receiver was burned to the bone, and he will be disabled for duty for some time. It was a narrow escape from permanent injury or possible electrocution.

RICHLAND TOWNSHIP WOMAN DIED THURSDAY

Mrs. Joseph Jackson Succumbs to Blood Poisoning After a Long Illness

Mrs. Ida Jackson, aged forty-nine years, wife of Joseph Jackson, of Richland township, died Thursday night, death resulting from blood poisoning after an illness of four months.

Mrs. Jackson was the mother of three children, all of whom are still under parental care. Deceased was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Linville, two of Richland township's oldest residents.

The funeral services will be held at the Hopewell church, Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Earley Burke. Burial at the Hopewell cemetery.

Besides her own family, deceased leaves four brothers, John and Frank Linville, of Richland township, and Charles and Milton Linville, of Chicago, and three sisters, Mrs. Mary Morgan, Mrs. Clara Cox and Miss Sarah Linville.

She was a faithful member of the M. E. church at Wesley Chapel.

WILL ADDRESS OLD VETERANS

The Department Commander
Ketchum to Visit Local G.
A. R. Lodge Soon

EFFORT TO FILL UP RANKS

Is Being Made And Every Old Soldier is Urged to Join

Department Commander of the G. A. R., W. A. Ketchum will be in this city on next Wednesday and deliver an address before the old veterans of this city and county.

The ranks of the G. A. R. are fast thinning, as the old veterans one by one answer the final roll call on the other shore, and it will be the purpose of Commander Ketchum to get the old veterans of the Civil war, who are not members of the G. A. R. to become such, in order to keep the membership up as long as possible.

Mr. Ketchum was here a few weeks ago to meet with the "old boys in blue," but the meeting was postponed on account of the late Mr. Brown's funeral, which was held on that day.

It is hoped that every old soldier in the county will be present at this meeting and get interested in this organization, which can last only a few years at the most.

This organization, unlike the Odd Fellows, Masons and other such orders, can not endure many years, by reason of the age of its members, each year, and none but these old veterans, who fought in the civil war are eligible to become members. So the organization must cease with the passing of its members.

RAPPING ROLLA SCARED A WOMAN

Also a Number of People Complain About Seeing a
"Peeping Tom"

A resident on North Harrison street—a lone woman—was frightened last night about ten o'clock by some miscreant tapping on the window. It could not have been done by a boy as the window is too high from the ground; and any man who would stoop to such a practice ought to be caught and severely punished.

Several instances of this nature have been reported lately and some complain about a "Peeping Tom" being seen about their premises. The husband of the Harrison street woman has "sworn in" a man to watch his house in an effort to catch the guilty party. He declares that he will sit in judgment on the case, if he catches the "rapper."

THE MASTER EFFORTS OF RUSHVILLE'S BEST COOKS

The second division of the Ladies Aid Society of St. Paul's M. E. church are having a cook book published, called "Culinary Hints," made up of many good recipes of some of Rushville's best cooks. It will be offered for sale and the profit realized turned into the society's treasury.

There was baptismal service at the Main Street Christian church, Thursday evening after prayer meeting, at which one candidate was baptized.

Miss Messing, the stenographer at Watson's Indianapolis headquarters, lost a valuable diamond ring this week. She is not in the ring now.

PANIC STRIKES HYMAN SHATZ

Tons of Old Iron Accumulate at His Junk Yards During Scare

THE ONLY ONE TO SUFFER

Some Facts About Junk Business Which Are Not Generally Known

"I guess I'm the first and only man in Rushville to be struck by the panic," lamented Hyman Schatz, the junk dealer yesterday. "The first man always to feel the calamity if there is the slightest ripple, is the poor junk and rag man. They will not buy old iron in open market and consequently we are obliged to carry it until the time they see fit to buy. All this time we have our money invested and it does not earn a cent. On many occasions it loses us money, for when the market does reach a normal stage and the jobbers begin to buy, they are flooded with junk."

To one unfamiliar with the business it hardly seems creditable that Mr. Schatz and his corps of local drivers buy and ship out of this city a car load of iron every two weeks. Where in the world do they get thirty tons of iron every two weeks of the year, you say? It would be difficult to answer the question, but nevertheless, it is always forthcoming.

At present the Schatz junk yard has the appearance of a hay field after harvest, with the hay ricks scattered about. In one pile, about twenty feet in height, twenty-five feet wide and seventy-five feet long, he has over three hundred tons of scrap iron.

To his yards, often comes the blacksmith to find a certain piece of iron or casting to complete some repair work, and it is very seldom that they look in vain, for every conceivable piece of iron ever fashioned can be found there.

Then again the farmers are good customers; what one sells at a ridiculously low figure may be just what another one needs to fix an old binder and usually he pays a fancy price, but only about one-third what it would cost if purchased new.

Old horse shoes and rubber in all shapes and sizes are to be found there in large quantities. You possibly never knew that after your horse wore out a set of shoes that they were picked up, remelted and made into railroad bars and other heavy iron work. And that the rubber hose which rotted from leaving out in the weather, was made into rubber nipples, pacifiers and other rubber articles.

Schatz is a philosopher; when asked if it did not follow that much stuff was stolen from him on account of being unable to put all of it in a warehouse, he replied: "Sure, they steal from me right and left, but they always sell the stuff back to me again."

When I have to buy it twice, I make two profits on them, you see." It has been said, in face of the rosy view Schatz takes of life, that he is only half Jew, and the other half Irishman.

HORSE THIEVES ARE HEADED THIS WAY

Working in all the Counties
Where Farmers are Not Organized

A gang of horse thieves are operating in Eastern Indiana. Today we received word from J. M. Fletcher, a detective at Winchester, that Rush county was on their line of operation and that it would pay the farmers to keep a sharp lookout.

The thieves are working in all the counties, where the Farmers Horse Thief Detective Association is not organized.

Rush county should have such an organization by all means.

TWO FORMER RUSHVILLE MEN IN REVIVAL MEETING

J. Walter Wilson is Singing For
Rev. J. H. McNeil at Winchester, Ky.

A telegram from Rev. J. H. MacNeill, formerly pastor of the Main Street Christian church in this city, to a Cincinnati paper, says that he is in a great revival meeting at Winchester, Ky., with thirty-two additions the first week.

It will be of interest to know that J. Walter Wilson, formerly proprietor of the Vaudet theatre in this city, is with Rev. MacNeill, and concerning him the telegram said: "J. Walter Wilson is leading the singing and sustaining his reputation as one of our leading evangelists."

RUSH COUNTY IS ON THE SQUARE

As Far as County Clerk Posey and His Deputy are

DO NOT OWE STATE A CENT

State Inspector Says Clerk's Books are Best Kept in the State

"In the sixty-nine counties, which I have visited since being sent out of the attorney general's office to inspect the county clerks' books in order to recover fees due the State of Indiana, I have never found any books that were in as good condition as County Clerk Posey's books," said Inspector Bingham today at the court house.

Inspector Bingham has been going over County Clerk Posey's books since Thursday and he has not been able to find a penny due the State which has not been paid. This is due to the efficiency and carefulness of County Clerk W. A. Posey and his deputy, Will C. McColgin, whose untiring efforts have kept the books square to the smallest item.

The Inspector says that in some counties he has found as much as $3500 due the State and he says that Rush county should feel justly proud of the men who are in charge of the local office.

AGED COUPLE WAS BORN ON SAME DAY

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mauzy, 57
Years Married, Celebrate
Joint Birthday

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Newhouse, of North Harrison street, entertained today in honor of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Newhouse's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mauzy. Mr. Mauzy was 80 years old today and his wife was 77 years of age, both of their birthdays falling on the same day.

Until this year the aged couple has always entertained the children, but commencing with this birthday the children will in turn entertain the parents as long as the Lord spares them for this life. They will have been married fifty-seven years next January.

Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McCarty, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Oline, Greeley P. Mauzy and daughter Miss Grace, Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Abberley and daughters, Josephine and Louise, Mrs. Margaret Beale, and Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Newhouse.

DO YOUR XMAS SHOPPING NOW

It Will be an Appreciative Gift to the Many Clerks and Merchants

DON'T WAIT UNTIL XMAS

Like Some Loafers Wait Until Saturday Night to Get Their Hair Cut

As the holidays come around year after year there is growing realization that the Christmas happiness in one man's home is the Christmas hardship in many another home.

Christmas shopping is quite generally left until the last week, often until the last day before Christmas. What this means to the clerks behind the counters, to the cash girls running back and forth with heavy parcels, to the drivers and "tail boys" on the delivery cars, to the packers and shippers, express messengers, and behind these to the great army of women and girls who manufacture Christmas toys and candies and knick-knacks in a factory and shop and sweat shops, is little realized by those who gather round the glittering Christmas trees.

Don't wait until the "holly days" to do your shopping unless a thin purse compels you to wait. Some shoppers are like the loafers who sit on the curb around the court house all week and then go to the barber shop on Saturday night to get a hair cut.

"To Christmas Shoppers—Buy your presents early—early in the day and early in December. That will be your biggest gift of the holiday to the workers behind the counters and on the delivery wagons."

CAN MAKE A LIVING TEACHING SCHOOL

"At Present Time and Future
Bright," Declares State
Superintendent

In the November bulletin sent out to County Superintendent W. O. Headlee, by State Superintendent Cotton, he has the following to say in regard to teaching: "The opportunity offered to young men and women to teach and at the same time get an education and prepare for better places ought to bring the very best material into the calling. It is hoped that more young men will see fit to prepare themselves for the work. It will pay. It may not pay so well in dollars and cents as a few other things, but it will pay. In clean, happy service and in the possibilities of self-culture it will pay wonderfully. And in money it will now give a living. 'All in all,' how many callings do more?"

RUSHVILLE COUPLE DO GOOD WORK IN THE NORTH

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gipson, formerly of Rushville, who are now engaged in the Salvation Army work, returned this week from an extended stay in the northern part of the State, where they have been carrying the banner of the Lord, and where they were largely instrumental in saving thirty-two souls in as many days.

—Edgar M. Haas, of Richmond, who will likely be a candidate for the Sixth District Republican chairmanship, was a visitor in Rushville, Thursday.

The Watson headquarters at the Claypool in Indianapolis, yesterday was a busy spot.

RECLAIMING LAND HE WENT TO JAIL

The State Will Recover Title to Thousands of Acres of Former Swamps.

Former President Maxwell of Borough Bank Couldn't Give Bond.

TITLES ARE BEING TRACED A GRAND LARCENY CHARGE

Land Department of State Auditor's Office Has Set Itself to an Important Task.

Now Rests Against Man Who Recently Slood High In the Financial Life of Brooklyn.

Deposed Cashier and a Director Are Also Jointly Charged With Maxwell.

Indianapolis, Nov. 22.—John C. Billheimer, auditor of state, is taking steps to reclaim for the state about 2,000 acres of swamp land in Laporte and Starke counties. The titles to the pieces of land involved are being traced in the land department of the auditor's office. An effort will be made to find who is now claiming each tract and then steps will be taken to clear the title for the state. It is said that most of those who are now occupying this land will be glad to surrender their claim and then have the opportunity to buy the land back at public sale.

When the land was entered only patents were issued for the dry land. Later, however, when the water receded, the swamp land was transferred by the owners along with the land which had been entered. It is the part of the land which was once covered with water that belongs to the state.

The Asset Realization company of Chicago has surrendered the claim which it had against 293 acres along the Kankakee river in Starke county. This land was occupied for many years by Hugh Kreuter. He mortgaged it to Paul Stensland, the Chicago bank wrecker, and Stensland transferred the claim to the Chicago company. The company formally surrendered its claim to Mr. Billheimer at Chicago. This swamp land which is to be reclaimed is not very valuable now because it is not well drained. A complete drainage system will make it productive.

STATEHOUSE TREE STOLEN Came From Holy Land Willow Planted by Martha Washington.

Indianapolis, Nov. 22.—The "statehouse tree" has been stolen and the theft probably will disturb the equilibrium of a historical society in Massachusetts. The theft was discovered this morning by Frank Roberts, assistant custodian, and all the statehouse detectives are now "on the trail."

The discovery of the theft is the result of a letter received from Mary Noyes Shaw of Rockland, Mass., by Frank I. Grubbs, assistant secretary of state. She said it was her understanding that a willow tree growing in the Indiana statehouse yard originally came from a tree which Martha Washington brought to Arlington Heights from the Holy Land. She said she understood it came from a cluster of trees where the children of Israel hung their harps in the days of captivity.

Investigation at the statehouse revealed the fact that the willow sprig which had been planted in the statehouse yard was received from a Washington society, and that it came from Arlington Heights. It was planted by Will Freeman, secretary of the state board of forestry, and Frank Roberts two years ago. Roberts was interested in the letter from Massachusetts, and when he went to look for the tree it was not there. The Massachusetts woman, it seems, is a member of a historical society, and she seeks to verify the report she has received in regard to the Indiana tree. A letter will be forwarded to her giving full explanation.

Accused of Embezzlement. Nashville, Ind., Nov. 22.—Thomas Durnall, formerly recorder of Brown county, is on trial here on a charge of embezzling about $500. After Durnall served his term as county recorder the commissioners employed experts to go over the books of several county officers, and as a result some shortages were found. An affidavit was filed against Durnall, charging him with embezzlement. Later the grand jury investigated matters and returned indictments charging the same offense.

To Stop Pole Cutting. Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 22.—Officials of the Sullivan interurban line have asked Judge Cox for a temporary injunction restraining a number of persons living in Pierson township from cutting down the poles of the company. The farmers say the company promised a fare of 10 cents between Youngstown and Terre Haute, in return for right-of-way privileges, but that recently the fare has been raised to 15 cents. It is said that the agreement was verbal.

Victim of Live Wire. Michigan City, Ind., Nov. 22.—August Dipeke, sixty years old, touched a guy wire here which had been crossed by a street arc light wire of 500 volts, and was burned to a crisp. His body was discovered by a lineman after the latter descended the pole and stumbled over the body in the darkness.

THANKSGIVING IN THIS FAMILY

"I firmly believe Father John's Medicine saved my wife from an early grave and restored her to her young family," says Mr. Cornelius O'Brein of 189 Charles St., East Cambridge, Mass. "For eighteen months, Mrs. O'Brien suffered from nervous prostration, and the several medicines recommended by her doctor did her no good. On a friend's advice, she began taking Father John's Medicine, and at once began to improve. She has now regained her health and says she will never lose faith in Father John's Medicine." Mr. O'Brien was recently cured of a serious cold by this old remedy. He gives Father John's Medicine to the babies to keep them fat and rosy, and says: "No family should be without a bottle of Father John's Medicine." For Sale by F. C. Wolcott.

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 29, 1907.

One thing Bryan makes plain—that if the corporation magnates chip in for his campaign, they'll have to do it without his knowledge.

Some enemy of the United States has induced a lot of German servant girls to emigrate to Southwest Africa instead of to this country.

Many criminals show an ingenuity, persistence and versatility which, if they had used along honest lines, would have made them wealthy and respected men. The infinite trouble and determination that some people exercise in trying to be bad is a striking commentary on the perversity of human nature.

The indifference of the voters forms the only real danger to the republic. It is incumbent on all good citizens to exercise the privilege of franchise, and this duty is especially imperative on men who occupy situations of public responsibility, for the sake of the example. Every man who combats the indifference of the electorate is doing a patriotic act. It unfortunately is true that an expression can not be obtained from the body of voters except under the excitement of a long political campaign, and even then there are hundreds of thousands of voters who go to the polls in half-way protest against the act of voting.

Among the various plans to relieve the financial stringency and to prevent its recurrence, we have not yet noticed the advocacy of the return to old fashioned morality and common honesty in the business transactions of Wall street, and the New York financiers—Richmond Item.

Various measures and remedies were advocated to relieve the money stringency, but the root of the evil was not struck. Stringent measures should be taken to teach those fellows in the East common business honesty. If present tendencies are not shifted, we may live to see financiers wearing tags, lettered something like this: "Investigated Feb. 30th; honesty guaranteed by federal government."

The New England States were always regarded as great manufacturing centers, and it is a surprise to know that the Southern States now surpass them in the amount of power employed for manufacturing. The Middle States come first, with about five million horse-power, the Central States second, with a little over four million, the Southern States third, with two million three hundred and eighty-six thousand, and New England fourth, with a trifle over two and a quarter million. The census bureau, which has gathered these statistics, also notes a great increase in electrical power, and in the number and size of gasoline engines.

The profits of the thread trust for the year ended June 30th, last, exceeded $15,000,000, smashing all records. Still, unless our memory is faulty, decreasing profits were given as the excuse for jacking up the price of thread.

for the winter, so he will not be on the ground to take much part in the race for governor. Senator Beveridge does not seem to be so terribly interested as represented. He is devoting a lot of time to his literary work and to preparation for a busy winter at Washington, so he hasn't as much time for gubernatorial politics as has been imagined. He is for former Attorney General Charles W. Miller and his appointees are working for the latter, but the indications are now that there is not much authority for the gossip about the war of extermination between the Beveridge and Fairbanks-Hemenway forces.

Captain Harry New, according to information given out here, may not be a candidate for re-election as a member of the national committee from this state, a position he has held through two campaigns. There is no talk of opposition to him, and it is believed generally that he could win in a fight, but it is said that he doesn't care to enter a contest. There are no signs of a conflict now between Vice President Fairbanks and Captain New, and it is not believed that the latter has any thoughts of trying to keep the former from getting a solid delegation from this state to the national convention. If the vice president is permitted to name his own delegates he could, as a matter of course, easily bring about the defeat of Captain New, as he would be in a position to dictate. It is believed, however, that the plan adopted by each district will be to elect delegates known to be friendly to the vice president, but not to permit his lieutenants to pick them out. If that course is pursued the contest for national committee will be wide open. Captain New's friends are hopeful that he will be elected national chairman.

Echo of a "Rough House." Lawrenceburg, Ind., Nov. 22.—Geo. W. Weaver entered Ambrosia Brill's cafe, knocking over a table covered with beer glasses, and spilling the contents of the glasses into the laps of patrons. Brill knocked Weaver down and dragged him into the street, and Weaver threw a boulder at Brill, missing his aim, and breaking a costly mirror. Weaver ran down the street, his speed accelerated by shots from Brill's revolver, and after his arrest a bullet was found in his shoe. This bullet struck a flask in his hip pocket and glanced downward, inflicting a slight wound.

Fontanet Damage Suit. Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 22.—The first damage suit against the Dupont Powder company for the Fontanet explosion has been filed. Mrs. Nora Richards is the plaintiff, and the amount asked is $10,000. She alleges damage to property and personal injuries. Her house was among the 275 damaged by the explosion, and she was one among several hundred persons injured.

HIS MAJESTY.

I'm king of the road! I gather
My toll on the world's highways.
They pave the street for my royal feet.
And the man in the wagon pays.
With my sturdy heels I laugh at wheels.
I hurry by no man's will.
For the rich who ride my meat provide.
They must feed the king to his fill.

I'm king of the road! Before me
My way lies over the land,
With a wild rose train from meadow and lane
And the hall of a song bird band.
They are slaves who team by wagon or steam.
The footman carries the crown.
What cares the tramp whose supper and camp
Are waiting in every town?

I'm king of the road all summer.
In winter I still go free.
Let the snow blast come. In a nook I'll chum
With a gypsy crew like me.
I'll ask no shares with home proud heirs.
They're the scorn of my soul while I
Can tread the floors of the great outdoors
And nobody ask me why.
—Theron Brown.

BE PHILOSOPHIC.

FOR some must win and some must lose,
So runs the world away.
Just pike along and disregard
The things the neighbors say.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Money in the Bank.

It is usually a combination of ignorance and fear which causes a run on banks during a commercial panic. Savings bank depositors are apt to be blind to the fact that their money cannot be kept on hand ready to be paid out at any moment, except enough of it to meet current demands, which will ordinarily be provided for from current receipts. It must be invested in interest bearing securities or in real estate loans so as to bring in the revenue from which interest is paid to depositors. If they make a sudden dash in great numbers for their money their bank will not have enough on hand, and the balance it keeps on deposit in other banks for emergencies will not be sufficient to meet a prolonged run. It must have time to realize upon securities by selling them and upon loans by their maturity, and in this there may be needless loss for the depositors as a whole. If the bank has to suspend or require its depositors to give it time by giving notice of withdrawals it is not necessarily a sign of weakness, but may be due to the blind selfishness and ignorance of those who are clamoring for their deposits without reason.

It is much the same with the ordinary depositors in commercial banks, many of whom nowadays, especially in cities, are small traders and women householders. They do not realize that their money is not always in the bank waiting for them whenever they are pleased to call for it. Most of it must be out working for the bank, invested in commercial paper or loans on security which takes time to mature. It is going out and coming in with a greater or less increment all the time, and only a portion is kept on hand in cash, rarely more than a quarter the amount on deposit at any time. All the deposits are subject to demand, but it is ordinarily expected that the demand actually made for paying out from day to day will not exceed the amount that is coming in in payments to the bank. The reserve is lying idle to meet exceptional demands, but the law requires it to be kept up even when such demands are made.

Recently a young business woman caught in a check forging case offered the excuse that she supposed that the money in the bank belonged to anybody who knew how to get it out. This is an exaggerated view, but the amateur depositor often acts upon the theory that the bank has his or her money in its vaults and must cash up on demand. Too many depositors of that kind may give the strongest bank in the land a "black" day.

An Italian singer has had her voice insured for $50,000, and her manager may now put prices up another notch in order to give the public a chance to pay the premium.

No wonder the steam turbine Lusitania again broke the ocean record when she had aboard $10,000,000 in gold just aching to get ashore and buy Christmas presents.

A company that has been manufacturing artificial limbs is now going to manufacture automobiles. No better side line could possibly have been selected.

An Australian physician claims that sour milk is the only real elixir of life. That diet ought to suit people who have dispositions to match it.

The new gold coins do not bear the legend "In God We Trust," but in spite of that Americans will no doubt continue to take chances.

The Vanderbilt baby is heir to $60,000,000. But even that is not likely to ward off the usual attacks of measles and other ailments.

Even an off year election makes lots of work for the men who try to figure out what the results signify.

One Way to Solve The Rebate Problem.

By Justice WILLIAM J. GAYNOR of the New York Supreme Court.

DO NOT THINK THE REBATE EVIL WILL EVER BE STOPPED EXCEPT BY THE GOVERNMENT TAKING OVER THE RAILROADS OR ELSE BY THE GOVERNMENT APPOINTING THE GENERAL FREIGHT AGENT OF EVERY INTERSTATE RAILROAD IN THE COUNTRY. THAT GENERAL FREIGHT AGENT WILL NOT HAVE THE FIXING OF THE RATES. THEY WILL BE FIXED BY THE RAILROADS, JUST AS THEY ARE NOW FIXED, BUT THAT GENERAL FREIGHT AGENT WILL SEE TO IT THAT NOBODY GETS HIS FREIGHT CARRIED FOR LESS THAN THE SCHEDULED RATES.

If any local agent should give a SECRET CUT or favor of other kind that might injure a competing shipper, the general freight agent would remove him INSTANTLY and also have him indicted and convicted. This would put an end SUMMARILY to all freight favoritism of this kind.

The other alternative is for the government to take the railroads. THIS I AM OPPOSED TO. After traveling in Europe and in this country I am satisfied that there is something of value to the public from private management of our railroads, and I would LEAVE THEM AS THEY NOW ARE. However, I would have a law by which the president would appoint the general freight agent of every interstate road in the country.

Bismarck tried in every way—exhausted the resources of his great mind and character—in efforts to stop favoritism in freight rates in Germany. In the end he exclaimed in despair: "THIS IS IMPOSSIBLE. It cannot be done. I would therefore have the government take the roads in order to stop it!" And the government did take over every railroad in the German empire.

Streetcar Riots.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 22.—Several disturbances, two of them developing into fair-sized riots, broke out last night in widely separated quarters of Louisville as a result of the first attempt of the Louisville Railway company to operate all its lines after nightfall. A number of persons, some of them passengers, were more or less painfully hurt. Neither side has thus far made a move toward peace. This is the eighth day of the strike and the tension seems to be on the increase.

Suspicion of Foul Play.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Nov. 22.—Coroner George F. Smith and officials are at work on what they believe to be a cold-blooded murder, the victim being Adolph Schuh, twenty-nine years old, a farmer of York township. The body of Schuh was found floating down Tanners creek, near his home, by his sister Barbara. When taken from the water the body was found to be still warm. Blood was flowing from his nose. It is believed that Schuh was murdered and robbed. It is thought that he had a considerable sum of money on his person. A stone hammer was discovered near where the body was discovered. He was to have been married during the month of December.

Officers Not Guilty.

Calro, Ill., Nov. 22.—Exonerated from the charge of reckless navigation, which endangered the life of the president of the United States during the river trip from Cairo to Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 3, was obtained for the officers and crew of the steamer Dick Fowler, who were found not guilty by United States Inspectors Waltz and Hodge, of Memphis.

Overstepped Its Bounds.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, Nov. 22.—The Polish Socialist organization has issued a decree providing for the dissolution of its fighting organization and declaring that the organization has been wholly used to further the aims of brigandage.

Lighted Streets in Europe.

The best lighted street in Europe, declares a weekly paper, is Unter den Linden, in Berlin. Perhaps it is, but we would not be sure. In the torrent seamed hills of the Jura, where water power is as cheap as anywhere in the world, there are little French villages in which every tiny cottage has its electric light installation, and the central street, that one could almost jump across, is flooded by the beams of arc lamps that would do credit to the Strand. However, the Berlin boulevard, otherwise a disappointing thoroughfare, is certainly well illuminated. Plate glass, Pilsener and policemen are the three most striking features of that capital, but the lighting of the streets is a good fourth.—London News.

Moments That Counted.

Bacon's fame is mainly due to books written in his spare hours while he was England's chancellor. Humboldt's days were so occupied with his business that he had to pursue his scientific labors in the night or early morning. Burns wrote his most beautiful poems in his spare moments while working on a farm. Grote wrote his "History of Greece" during the odds and ends of time snatched from his duty as a banker. "Moments are the golden sands of time" if rightly used.

Grass Eggs.

When a hen is made sick eating too freely of grass she lays what are known as "grass eggs." Grass eggs are poor stuff. They have an unpleasant flavor, and the yolk wobbles around in a weak and watery white and is green and dull in color. The term is one applied by candlers, who discover while testing that there is a pale greenish hue to the eggs and that they are not at all of the bright, fresh color that we find in healthy eggs.—Baltimore American.

Here's Where the Fun Comes In

Carl Gunning, hotel clerk at the Windsor is an amateur ventriloquist of no mean ability. And there is "where the fun comes in." He can send out two or three words as good as a professional and they sound like they come from the opposite side of the room. One night recently City Marshal Price came into the hotel office and sat down in a chair to meditate. A lone traveling man was the only other person in the office save Carl, and he was engaged in reading a newspaper.

After a silence of some fifteen or twenty minutes, the clerk, who was busily engaged posting books, "threw out" from the cellar of his voice chamber the greeting: "Hello there!"

Both Price and the drummer looked up, and thinking the other had spoken, nodded to each other. Price continued the conversation saying: "How do you do?"

The stranger replied: "All right, how are you?"

That concluded the dialogue, but Price was wondering what in the world the fellow meant by speaking after sitting thier for such a long time in silence, and the traveling man was probably thinking the same thing.

Carl never looked up or even smiled.

BUTTER BY THE YARD.

The Way It Is Sold, Pure and Sweet, In Cambridge, England.

In Cambridge, England, butter is sold by the yard. For generations it has been the practice of Cambridge-shire dairy folk to roll their butter into lengths, each length measuring a yard and weighing a pound. Deftly wrapped in strips of clean white cloth, the cylindrical rolls are packed in long, narrow baskets made for the purpose and thus conveyed to market. The butter women who, in white linen aprons and sleeves, preside over the stalls in the market have no need of weights or scales for dispensing their wares. Constant practice and experienced eyes enable them with a stroke of the knife to divide a yard of butter into halves or quarters with almost mathematical exactness.

The university people are the chief buyers of this curiosity shaped product. In addition to being famed for its purity and sweetness Cambridge "yard butter" is eminently adapted for being served to the students in the daily commons. Cut in conveniently sized pieces and accompanied by a loaf of the best wheat bread, a stated portion is sent round every morning to the rooms of the undergraduates for use at breakfast and tea.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Thought He Knew Him.

A laborer was engaged in the grounds of an asylum and received instructions to pay no attention whatever to the remarks of the patients.

Some little time after he commenced work the governor of the asylum, a well known doctor, looking at the progress of the work, mildly suggested one alteration. The workman dug steadily on and never lifted his head. The doctor raised his voice, but the man, without answering, went on digging energetically. The doctor threatened, stormed and finally thundered out:

"Do you know who I am?" The laborer straightened his back, looked at him a minute and, shaking his head, sorrowfully exclaimed: "Poor chap! I am sorry for ye," and went on calmly with his work.—London Express.

THE OBITUARY OF LIVE MEN.

Let's Send the Flowers Over Now.—Dead Men Can Neither See, Smell or Appreciate.

"Like D'Artagnan in Dumas' Three Musketeers, Lon Stewart first came to town on a yellow pony. That was in the day when the court house square was bound all around with a hitch-rack. The first day Lon hitched his steed to the squared chain, he stood and watched the animal all the day fearing some of the 'town boys' would make away with it or his wheat sack saddle.

Lon's first ambition was to be a book agent. He bought the county rights to "The Beautiful, the Wonderful and the Wise," in Franklin county, and proceeded to make a house to house canvass over those hills with a footing underneath that would fool a Rocky Mountain goat. As a failure he was a howling success, for after four weary weeks, he gave up the ghost without having sold a volume. This, too, it will be remembered was before the Andy Carnegie free library days. One day he came to his senses and threw the prospectus away, and struck out on the path of hard labor to earn a livelihood.

It was while pitching horse shoes that he first appreciated the talents that lay dormant down in his system, and encouraged by the fact that he could kill a squirrel with a stone fifty paces away, and skin all the sure shots at horse shoes he took up civil engineering as his life's work.

With a good instrument and an elegant sufficiency of bull dog tenacity, he slowly forged his way out of the hills and to the front, until an applauding public cheered him as the "Monarch of All he Surveyed." (Not all the land—just about $5 a day, or a good chicken lot off every acre.)

Together with Henry Clevenger (who had the contract for grading the court house yard) he was largely instrumental in building our beautiful half million dollar court house.

But back to the good old days. Lon is a close observer, and he soon noted that no one rode yellow ponies, wore high top boots and paper collars, and after two or three visits in this city, he soon put them behind him. Riding to town for the first time in a vehicle—an old wagon—one of his traces broke when three or four miles out. He was too backward to ask assistance from the strange farmers nearby, and after much deliberation, he took off his shoe and sock, and used the latter to mend the break. Hardly necessary to comment on the above mentioned piece of wearing apparel being strong, etc., etc.)

Mr. Stewart's advent into the 400 in Rushville was via the Society Circus given here by the elite about fifteen years ago, when he appeared in pink tights as a female bare back rider.

And speaking about circuses, they tell a story about the first show he ever saw under canvas which is worthy of repetition.

After being separated from his surplus change at the red lemonade stands, perfume joints and peanut roasters, he wandered into the menagerie tent. There for the first time in his life he saw a dromedary. The ugly camel made an impression with Alonzo, and he stood and looked at it for over an hour, never taking his eyes off the animal. Even the shouting of the enthusiastic crowd, the playing of the band, the hurrahing and yelling of the performers, and the noises of the other animals in the tent did not phase him. He was intensely interested in that dromedary with his side shifting lower jaw and the hump on its back. Of a sudden he turned away, and half disgustedly muttered aloud: "Aw pshaw! there never was such an animal as that."

Mr. Stewart is a self made man in every respect, and has acquired by hard labor a comfortable amount of this world's goods. He is a natural draftsman and the plans and specifications he made for the sewer system now under course of construction in Rushville, are used for a text in Purdue University, of which Mr. Stewart is a graduate.

He is now at home in a plain finish, old mission house in North Main street, the first house this side of Knightstown.

Beck, of Arlington. They immediately left for Hamilton, Ohio, to spend a few weeks, after which they will be at home to their many friends who wish them a long and happy life. Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre are well known here, the groom being employed in Warfield & Wilson's factory. A reception will be given by the bride's parents upon their return.

The Riggs-Freeman bridge whist club will meet this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Riggs, in North Perkins street.

The Friday Afternoon club was delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lakin, in North Main street this afternoon.

About one hundred guests were present at the "Rube Soule," given by the members of the Pocahontas lodge Thursday evening, and the evening was enjoyed in pleasant games, songs, recitations and refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Miller will entertain at dinner tonight honoring their niece, Miss Hazel Spurrier, a December bride.

Arrangments are made for a great reception for the new members of the Main Street Christian church who recently united with the local congregation in the revival meetings. The social will be given for the purpose of the members becoming better acquainted and a cordial invitation is extended to all. Light refreshments will be served in the church parlors.

The Research Society met Thursday afternoon at the country home of Mrs. John Beale in Jackson township, and had a delightful session. Their subject was "American Artists and Their Work," and it proved a most interesting subject. Dainty refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Bert Mullin, in North Perkins street.

MODERN SURGERY.

Its Minute and Elaborate System of Sterilization.

The scene at an operating table in one of our hospitals now would make one of the old masters of surgery stare. The operator himself and all his staff are dressed like the old holy priests of Solomon's temple, wearing white caps and gowns, with the nurses standing around like priestesses all in spotless white, while every one about the table has gone through as many ablutions as befits the occasion of a bloody sacrifice under the auspices of the immaculate goddess of cleanliness. A minute and elaborate ritual has been observed of sterilizing everything—towels, threads, needles, forceps, instruments and what not—while the floor itself is made of glass or glazed tiles rather than of wood. The surgeon himself does not venture to cut the victim till he has put on his sterilized gloves, because he cannot possibly clean his fingers enough. Should any onlooker take his hand out of his pocket to reach for the gaping wound he would be ejected instantly for spoiling the whole performance with his defiling touch.

The results of this vigilant war against microbes are simply marvelous and can be fully appreciated only by those who, like myself, can remember the surgery of former days in hospital wards and on the battlefield.—Everybody's Magazine.

"Helen! What are you doing here?"
"You must go away quickly," she gasped. "They're trying to arrest you."
"They? Who? Arrest me for what?"
"Voorhees and his men—for riot or something about last night."
"Nonsense," he said. "I had no part in it. You know that."
"Yes, yes—but you're a vigilante, and they're after you and all your friends. Your house is guarded and the town is alive with deputies. They've planned to jail you on some pretext or other and hold you indefinitely. Please go before it's too late."
"How do you know this?" he asked gravely.
"I overheard them plotting."
"Who?"
"Uncle Arthur and Mr. McNamara." She faced him squarely as she said it and therefore saw the light flame up in his eyes as he cried:
"And you came here to save me—came here at the risk of your good name?"
"Of course. I would have done the same for Dextery." The gladness died away, leaving him listless.
"Well, let them come. I'm done, I guess. I heard from Wheaton tonight. He's down and out, too—some trouble with the Trisco courts about jurisdiction over these cases. I don't know that it's worth while to fight any longer."
"Listen," she said. "You must go. I am sure there is a terrible wrong being done, and you and I must stop it. I have seen the truth at last, and you are in the right. Please hide for a time at least."
"Very well. If you have taken sides with us there's some hope left. Thank you for the risk you ran in warning me."
She had moved to the front of the compartment and was peering forth between the draperies when she stifled a cry.
"Too late! Too late! There they are. Don't part the curtains. They'll see you."
Pushing through the gambling hall were Voorhees and four others, seemingly in quest of some one.
"Run down the back stairs," she breathed and pushed him through the door. He caught and held her hand with a last word of gratitude. Then he was gone. She drew down her veil and was about to follow when the door opened and he reappeared.
"No use," he remarked quietly.

IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS.

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Rushville Citizen Shows How to Cure Them

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. So it is with all other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is just where the danger lies. You must cure these troubles or they may lead to diabetes or Bright's disease. The best remedy to use is Doan's Kidney Pills. It cures all ills which are caused by weak or diseased kidneys. Rushville people testify to permanent cures.

L. B. Downey, 702 N. Sexton Street, Rushville, Ind., says:

"Doan's Kidney Pills are all right and I can strongly recommend them for lumbago. I had a terrible lameness in my back that prevented me from turning in bed or rising from a chair quickly. My kidneys were also weak and a disordered condition of the kidney secretions existed. When I learned how positive Doan's Kidney Pills were in curing such difficulties, I got a box of the remedy at F. B. Johnson & Company's drug store. They soon banished the pains and lameness in my back and strengthened my kidneys. I am not troubled any more with an aching in the top of my head. I know Doan's Kidney Pills to be a reliable remedy for such troubles."

"There are three more waiting at the foot." He looked out to find that the officers had searched the crowd and were turning toward the front stairs, thus cutting off his retreat. There were but two ways down from the gallery and no outside windows from which to leap. As they had made no armed display, the presence of the officers had not interrupted the dance.

Glenister drew his revolver, while into his eyes came the dancing glitter that Helen had seen before, cold as the glint of winter sunlight.

"No, not that, for God's sake!" she shuddered, clasping his arm.

"I must for your sake or they'll find you here, and that's worse than ruin. I'll fight it out in the corridors so that you can escape in the confusion. Wait till the firing stops and the crowd gathers." His hand was on the knob when she tore it loose, whispering hoarsely: "They'll kill you. Wait! There's a better way. Jump." She dragged him to the front of the box and pulled aside the curtains. "It isn't high, and they won't see you till it's too late. Then you can run through the crowd."

He grasped her idea, and, slipping his weapon back into its holster, laid hold of the ledge before him and lowered himself down over the dancers. He swung out unhesitatingly, and almost before he had been observed had dropped into their midst. The gallery was but twice the height of a man's head from the floor, so he landed on his feet and had drawn his revolver even while the men at the stairs were shouting at him to halt.

At sight of the naked weapons there was confusion, wherein the commands of the deputies mingled with the shrieks of the women, the crash of overturned chairs and the sound of tramping feet, as the crowd divided before Glenister and swept back against the wall in the same ominous way that a crowd in the street had once divided on the morning of Helen's arrival. The trombone player, who had sunk low in his chair with closed eyes, looked out suddenly at the disturbance, and his alarm was blown through the horn in a startled squawk. A large woman whimpered, "Don't shoot," and thrust her palms to her ears, closing her eyes tightly.

He lowered himself down over the dancers.

Glenister covered the deputies, from whose vicinity the bystanders surged as though from the presence of lepers. "Hands up!" he cried sharply, and they froze into motionless attitudes, one poised on the lowest step of the stairs, the other a pace forward. Voorhees appeared at the head of the flight and rushed down a few steps only to come abruptly into range and to assume a like rigidity, for the young man's aim shifted to him.

"I have a warrant for you," the officer cried, his voice loud in the hush. "Keep it," said Glenister, showing his teeth in a smile in which there was no mirth. He backed diagonally across the hall, his boot heels clicking in the silence, his eyes shifting rapidly up and down the stairs where the danger lay.

NOT FOR CUMMINS

Iowa's Governor Takes a Hand In Widely Touted Prize Fight.

GAVE IT A KNOCK-OUT BLOW

Gov. Cummins Ordered Militia to Take Charge of Building Where Mill Was to Be Pulled Off.

Thousands of Tickets Had Been Sold and Davenport Was Filled With Disgusted "Spoils."

Davenport, Ia., Nov. 22.—Governor Cummins took a hand in Davenport's widely advertised McFarland-Herman prize fight last evening, and with the aid of a company of Iowa's national guard soldiers, ordered it stopped even before it began. Four thousand or more seats had been sold for the occasion, a thousand people came in special trains from Chicago and other cities, and Davenport was filled last night with a disgusted lot of sports.

Yesterday Governor Cummins satisfied himself that the fight at Davenport was not to be a mere "scientific sparring exhibition," as it had been carefully advertised, and there was also the suspicion that if left to local officers there might be a liberal construction of the statute prohibiting prize fighting. Therefore late in the afternoon Governor Cummins called out the militia at Davenport and ordered them to take possession of the Coliseum, where the fight was to be pulled off. He also wired the sheriff at Davenport directing him to co-operate in every way with the militia.

A compromise was finally arranged under which the program was carried out, the contest being "for points only," the militia remaining on the scene. McFarland proved his superiority over Herman by easily beating the latter in a fifteen-round fight without a decision. No decision was awarded because of the governor's order to the militia to prevent a fight.

Shut Out at Columbus.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 22.—Chief of Police O'Connor has notified the persons arranging for a boxing contest between "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien and William Heveron of Rochester, in this city tonight, that the bout will not be permitted.

"OH, HOW HAPPY I AM!"

Exclaimed Mrs. Hartje, and Then Sank Helplessly to the Floor.

Pittsburg, Nov. 22.—Joy over the decision by the superior court in Philadelphia proved too much for Mrs. Mary Scott Hartje, sued for divorce by Augustus Hartje, the millionaire paper manufacturer, and today she is reported in a state of collapse at Ligonier, Pa., her temporary home since the trial here.

Mrs. Hartje was called to the telephone, and when told that the superior court had affirmed the findings of the lower court and that she had won a complete victory, she turned pale and swayed toward a chair, saying: "I've won! Oh, how happy I am! Please send word to my father." Then she broke into hysterical sobbing and sank helplessly to the floor.

NOTES SIMPLY RENEWED

They Were Not Paid, Contrary to Contention of Walsh Defense.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—That twenty of the memorandum notes discounted by the Chicago National bank, representing the sum of $1,840,000 remained unpaid when the bank suspended in December, 1905, and that many of the notes declared by the defense to have been paid at maturity were not paid, but simply renewed, were facts brought out in the trial of John R. Walsh, charged with misappropriating the bank's funds.

On the re-direct examination of National Bank Examiner E. P. Moxey, the same process of identifying entries in the books of the bank which was pursued in the direct examination was carried out. The witness identified entries showing the discounting of the notes. He then turned to an account, showing discounted notes paid to show that the obligations were met when due. Another register, however, indicated that on the precise dates that payments were made new notes for the same amounts were made. The collateral book also was used to show that the security for the new notes were the same as for the old ones. Evidence was also introduced to show that the notes were drawn and signed in the various names, as previously indicated, by bank employees at the direction of Mr. Walsh.

While the re-direct examination of Mr. Moxey was in progress, Assistant Attorney Dobyns brought in the name of "F. S. Walker" as the maker of a memorandum note. The attorneys for Mr. Walsh objected to this on the ground that no such memorandum note had been mentioned in the indictment. Assistant State Attorney Dobyns explained to the court that the government expected to show that the name of F. S. Walker was used as a substitute for a note signed by W. J. Fitzgerald. It was also stated by the assistant district attorney that the name of R. H. J. Farrell was used as a substitute for the name of B. C. Cowen and that the same collateral was used in both cases. The claim of the government was that when the Cowen and Fitzgerald notes were recorded on the books of the Chicago National bank as having been paid, no money went into the bank, but that the Farrell and Walker notes were substituted for them. The defense made a strong objection to the introduction of evidence, but was overruled. The two notes were then traced by Mr. Moxey and declared to have been unpaid when the bank closed.

Other memorandum notes amounting to $730,000 were traced by Mr. Moxey, who declared that the funds from them had been used by Mr. Walsh. The government then sought to introduce the reports made by Mr. Walsh to the Chicago clearing house. It claimed that many of them were false. The defense fought earnestly against this, but after long arguments was overruled by the court.

KEPT IT QUIET

Miss Mer's Testimony Was Taken Behind Closed Doors.

New York, Nov. 22.—Helen Mer, an English actress, appeared before Referee McClure to give testimony in connection with the suit for separation instituted by Mrs. Catherine Clemmons Gould against her husband, Howard Gould. Miss Mer's appearance was the result of a decision rendered by Justice O'Gorman in the supreme court a few days ago that her testimony be taken before the actual opening of the trial, as she is about to sail for England. It is alleged by Mr. Gould in an affidavit which has been filed in court that he believes Mrs. Gould made Miss Mer her confidant concerning her relations, prior to her marriage to Mr. Gould, with Colonel W. F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill").

The affidavit further declares that Mr. Gould believes that the relations were meretricious, although he says Miss Clemmons before their marriage assured him they were purely of a business nature. Miss Mer's testimony was given behind closed doors.

MADE STRONG POINT

Mrs. Bradley Secures Admission of Brown's Acknowledgment.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The story of former United States Senator Brown's acknowledgment of the paternity of the two youngest of Mrs. Bradley's children was told in Judge Stafford's court by other lips than hers. "I acknowledge Arthur Brown and Martin Montgomery as my children by Annie M. Bradley," such was Mr. Brown's own method of expressing himself on the subject, and the legend was inscribed on a soiled and blotted piece of writing paper.

It was dated Feb. 10, 1905, and was brought to light by Colonel Maurice M. Kaighn, an attorney of Salt Lake City, the present receiver in the United States land office in that city and a friend of Senator Brown of thirty years' standing. Colonel Kaighn was on the witness stand for about an hour during the afternoon session of the Bradley trial and testified that Mrs. Bradley brought the tell-tale slip of paper to his office just after she secured it from Mr. Brown, with the ink not yet dry; how she fairly danced into his room and how she beamed with joy as she held the paper aloft and told him that now all would be well. Colonel Kaighn related many interesting facts concerning his association with both Senator Brown and Mrs. Bradley, and on the whole made by far the best witness for the little woman who has yet taken the stand, herself excepted. He told in simple but forcible language of many dramatic interviews with Mrs. Bradley, and closed with the opinion that she had become a monomaniac on the subject of her relationship to the ex-senator. He said he believed her mind to have been unbalanced.

"I hate to do it," he said, after he left the stand, "for Senator Brown was one of my most intimate friends, but one cannot trifle with one's conscience."

Other testimony in Mrs. Bradley's behalf was given by Major Samuel A. King, who related many incidents going to show that Mrs. Bradley was in a very nervous condition for some time before coming to Washington. More placid, more capable of asserting control over herself and more resourceful, apparently, than when she took the witness stand on Tuesday, Mrs. Bradley left yesterday after monopolizing the attention of the court for two days and a half. She was more composed than at any previous time, and her counsel expressed confidence that she should have been able to have gone on longer if called on to do so. She was especially pleased when Colonel Kaighn told the story of her presentation to him of Senator Brown's acknowledgment of her children.

The Grand Theatre will offer an innovation in pictures for tonight, tomorrow afternoon and night, entitled, "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," a dramatization of the famous fairy story with which every man, woman and child is familiar. This film is exceptionally fine and the management is assured that it has been but once in this State prior to coming there, which is conclusive evidence that this city is getting the new films as fast as produced. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic for the Week Beginning Nov. 24, 1907.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Home missions. The progress of work among the immigrants.—Num. xv, 13-16, 29-31.

The population of the United States in 1900, excluding insular possessions, was 76,303,387. Of this population 10,460,085 were foreign born and 15,687,322 the children of foreign born parents. Thus every third person in the United States is foreign born or the child of a foreign born parent. Nor has the tide of immigration from almost all European countries receded since 1900. Instead it has been greatly increased, and now not less than 1,000,000 foreigners come to our country in a year. Another fact worthy of notice today is that these millions are not coming, as formerly, from the better classes of Europe, but from the masses of the citizens of unfavored nations, and particularly unfavored so far as government is concerned. The tendency a few years back was to look upon this great immigration as a national peril and menace, but the better thought of today tends to look upon them as a future blessing. They are doing today industrial work in connection with great railroad, municipal and other enterprises that Americans would not do. Moreover, in a generation or two, under the influences of environment, the public schools and missionary labors, they will be entirely changed in appearance, disposition and in character. In all our great cities today many of the young people of these immigrants who were themselves born abroad are holding positions of trust and responsibility, and in dealing with them one would scarcely believe that they had been born in Russia, Austria or southern Italy. Our presbytery of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church has nine young Italians under its care studying for the ministry, and the average American student passes no better examinations than they nor present a more intelligent and pleasing appearance. Their conception of true religion and of the responsibility of the ministry is a superior one, and their desire is to preach the gospel to their own people.

The immigrants, therefore, in our country are making rapid strides physically, mentally and spiritually. There is no question of their progress, and the only question is for church and state to use effectively the opportunities for the advancement of "the strangers within our gates."

The great centers of foreign population are the large eastern cities, Chicago in the west and many western agricultural sections. About 40 per cent of the immigrants remain in New York state, 30 per cent settle in Pennsylvania, and the remainder is distributed now in many states, but especially in the west and northwest. Here the greatest work must be done, and the amount of work that is being done for the elevation and salvation of these people in such cities as New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Chicago would be astounding to those who have never investigated the subject. Individual churches in these cities often have missions among the foreigners, and the ecclesiastical bodies of most of our large denominations carry on systematic mission work among them and have regularly organized missions and churches. In Philadelphia there is the largest and most flourishing Protestant Italian church in the country. Its membership is up in the hundreds, but this is only a small part of the great numbers, especially of the men, who attend the services. The children are taught both on Sabbath and through the week and make wonderful progress. Work is also carried on among the Chinese, Hungarians and other foreign people. So it is in New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago and other cities and in our great industrial and mining sections. These millions of people are not criminals and illiterates. They work, and work hard. They are seldom lawless unless led by demagogic leaders. They want their children to have the best advantages, and in this lies our opportunity. These people in at least small numbers are in nearly every community. They can be led to Christ. They are being led to Him. Are we doing our part to win them?

Its Record is Inspiring.

No organization has played a more important part in movements in behalf of the moral uplift in the world than the Christian Endeavor society. Its good work is written large in the world's history, and the field of its usefulness is constantly widening. Reports submitted by the officers of the organization plainly tell the colossal character of the work carried on by this band of earnest and worthy men and women.

The society's record is inspiring. With so much good achieved, it is no desperate hazard to say that the half is not yet told. Seattle is fortunate to entertain men and women who have wrought so enduringly in the world's affairs.—Editorial in Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VIII.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 24, 1907.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Rom. xiv, 12-23. Memory Verses, 19-21—Golden Text, Rom. xiv, 13—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1907, by American Press Association.]

How wondrously beautiful is the oneness of this marvelous book! Last week in the book of Judges we saw the necessity of a consistent life and a clear testimony, with our eyes ever upon our Leader, and in a previous lesson the exhortation was to consider how great things He has done for us and serve Him in sincerity and truth. Now we pass over to this New Testament epistle for a lesson, and it is to consider Christ as our Judge that we may deny self and live unto Him, seeking to deliver others from the great enemy, the oppressor and destroyer, and hasten the reign of Christ in righteousness on this earth.

It is still the world's night, and people are living in rioting and drunkenness, and the children of God seem to be asleep, as Jonah was when the sailors were calling upon their gods, but the time of the kingdom is ever drawing nearer, and it becomes the child of God to "put on the Lord Jesus Christ and make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof" (Rom. xiii, 11-14).

We can neither convert this world nor remove iniquity from it—our Lord will see to that at His coming again and will begin at Israel (Isa. lx, 21; lxi, 1, 2)—but we can as individuals abandon ourselves to Him that He may accomplish in and through us that which He has purposed. If every believer would, in view of the fact that all believers must appear before the judgment seat of Christ and every one of us give account of himself to God, lay to heart and live out the words of verse 8, "Whether we live we live unto the Lord, and whether we die we die unto the Lord; whether we live, therefore, or die we are the Lord's," we and others through us would be greatly blessed and made a blessing. I do not know how to account for the unbelief of, and the ill treatment the word of God receives from, many preachers, professors in theological seminaries and innumerable members of churches unless it be that they ignore the judgment seat of Christ, where every believer shall give account of himself to God. Compare II Cor. v, 10, 11; I Cor. iii, 13-15.

The sin of judging others may not seem to be as great as the sin of intemperance, yet here is an exhortation as plain as "be not drunk with wine," "Let us not therefore judge one another any more" (Eph. v, 18, and lesson verse 13). Compare Matt. vii, 1, and I Cor. iv, 5, "Judge not that ye be not judged," and "Judge nothing before the time until the Lord come," and let us learn to obey. This talk of doing as we please and not being responsible for the weaknesses of others is wholly selfish and intemperate and most un-Christlike, for "even Christ pleased not Himself" (Rom. xv, 3). If our thought is to win men to Christ, "by all means to save some" (I Cor. ix, 22), we will not think of pleasing ourselves. It seems to me that our lives as followers of Jesus Christ will be holy or otherwise in proportion to our knowledge of the kingdom of God (verse 17). The kingdom of God for which we pray when we say "Thy kingdom come!" is nothing less than the will of God done on earth as in heaven and will be a reality after our Lord has been reigning a thousand years and has subdued all things to Himself, the last enemy, death, having been destroyed (I Cor. xv, 25-28). If the hastening of this kingdom is our first aim, according to Matt. vi, 33, we may be sure that He will see to our having sufficient food and raiment, as He promised.

All classes of unrighteous people, including drunkards (I Cor. vi, 9-11), are excluded as such from the kingdom, but there is righteousness for them also if they will turn from their sins and receive the Lord Jesus as their Saviour. He has made peace for all by the blood of His cross (Col. i, 20), and there is no one who may not have His righteousness and peace and joy. If we who have these gifts by His grace are thinking more of our own enjoyment of them than of helping others to receive them and instead of commending Him and them are found disputing about what we consider our rights in the matter of eating and drinking, how dwelleth the love of God in us? If we are right with God, our question will not be may I do this or that, but how can I win some one to Christ, and if we think that anything, however lawful for us, will prove a hindrance or stumbling block to some weak one we will for Christ's sake and for the other's sake gladly refrain.

Our hearts will tell us quickly if the thing is quite right in the sight of God. "If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart and knoweth all things; if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God (I John iii, 20-22, and verse 22 of the lesson). The main topic of the Bible is 'love, and 'love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law" (xiii, 10). If around the world on this so called world's temperance Sunday there could be a worldwide proclamation of the love of God in Christ Jesus to all sinners and His readiness to give righteousness, peace and joy to all through that precious blood, what a great day it might be.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Nov. 24: "Temperance." "The evil of strong drink."—Prov. xxiii, 29-35.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D. Passages for reference—Heb. ii, 15; Isa. v, 20-25.

The Hebrew expressions in this passage from Proverbs are striking, and our translation, though it gives the meaning of the terms, does not fully preserve their forcefulness. "Who hath ah? Who hath alas?" would give rather more of the spirit of the simple original. What can be more accurate than this description of the evils which come from the use of intoxicants! The ah and alas, the contention and complaining of life, causeless or unnecessary wounds, darkness of the eyes, would be vastly less if this evil was not so universal. What mischief does it not cause! Scarcely anything will work greater havoc of the physical powers. Every vital function is disturbed, damaged, diseased and eventually destroyed by the continued use of alcoholic stimulants. Some may for a time fancy that they are benefited by their use in moderation. No one ever contended that drunkenness was beneficial. And it is too well known now to be disputed that even the use in moderation is harmful and dangerous.

What wreck alcohol makes of the mental powers! Some work for a time under its spur, more brilliantly and more rapidly, perhaps. But it is a fatal speed and a delusive keenness which is gained. It is unnatural and forced. It is not sane in results nor safe to the producer. If long continued, it proves exhausting. It cannot be trusted.

Still more serious is the wreck it makes of the moral prowess. It destroys the power of moral discrimination, blunts the edge of all sense of right and weakens to impotency the strength of good resolve.

But it is worse than this in its effects. Not only is the moral and intellectual personality of the individual ruined and bodily health undermined, but the social and political and business interests of the whole community are affected adversely.

It has been so fully demonstrated as to be undeniable that the trade in intoxicants does not benefit the community, but may be declared a nuisance. No revenue from licenses or taxes ever compensated for the evil wrought. This is accurately and exactly true regarding the material interests of a community when taken in the largest sense. It is profoundly so when the moral welfare is put into the balance.

No liquor business of any kind and no use of liquors ever made a company of people more manly and noble, more elevated in tone of life or more worthy of respect. It has never stimulated to deeds of patriotic daring, never nerved to heroic suffering and endurance. It has furnished no shining examples of philanthropy, led in no plans for the amelioration of distress and the suppression of crime.

It has been the prolific source of all crimes and vices private and public. It has defied all laws, disregarded all rights and trampled under foot all decency. It is evil and that only and continually. It should be utterly exterminated, and we should help do it.

The Best Thing.

The best thing in this world is a good man. The first thing that a human being should recognize about himself is that his character is his distinguishable feature. It is not the amount of money, the amount of power, the amount of brains, that a man has, but his character. Whatever fellow men may say or do to the contrary, this is a fact—that what separates him from others and gives him his individuality is his goodness or lack of goodness, according to its degree. Money, power and brains have their place and exert an influence in deciding a man's position and recognition, but by the standard of ages, by which every one is tried in character and in God's sight, which is the final and determined sight, men are what they are in wishes and purposes. It is not, then, too much to say that the supreme ambition of a person's life should be to secure a worthy character.

Your daily duties are part of your religious life just as much as your devotions.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Keep Happy.

Join the great company of those who make the barren places of life fruitful with kindness. Carry a vision of heaven in your souls and you shall make your home, your college, the world correspond to that vision. Your success and happiness lie in you. External conditions are the accidents of life, its outer trappings. The great, enduring realities are love of service. Joy is the holy fire that keeps our purpose warm and our intelligence aglow. Resolve to keep happy and your joy and you shall form an invincible host against difficulty.—Helen Keller.

To Grow or Not.

A stone may lie hid in the richest earth forever and not grow an inch, but give a seed a handful of poor soil in a crevice and it will push up to the sun. It is not our opportunities, but ourselves, that decide whether we shall grow or not.—Forward.

An Inner Life.

Every one ought to have a second or inner life above that life which he leads among others for the purpose of his avocation, be it to gain money or power or fame or to serve his country or his neighbors.—James Bryce.

Avoiding Trouble.

How much trouble he avoids who does not look to see what his neighbor says or does or thinks, but only to what he does himself, that it may be just and pure.—Marcus Aurelius.

To contradict certain talk and to put the consuming public in possession of the truth, we say in plain words that no one in this town can sell as good coffee as Arbuckles' Ariosa for as little money.

Misbranded and make-believe Mocha and Java, or coffee sold loose out of a bag or a bin, is not as good value for the money, nor can it be sold at as narrow profit, nor reach the consumer under as favorable conditions.

When you buy Arbuckles' Ariosa Coffee you get more than 16 net ozs. of straight, wholesome Brazilian coffee from the largest coffee firm in the world, with that firm's direct assurance that they are giving you the best coffee in the world for the money.

Plans were laid for one of the most enthusiastic campaigns for new members in the history of the organization. Miss Elizabeth Flint and G. P. McCarthy were appointed captains of the two contestant teams, and together with a number of lieutenants, the work will begin, securing new members at the social which will be held this evening at the church for the reception of new church members.

A Monster Spring. No state in the Union has larger or more numerous springs than Florida. Many of them form good sized streams from the start, and some of them are navigable. The largest spring in the state, and one of the largest and probably the best known in the United States, is Silver spring, which is located six miles east of Ocala. This spring forms the source of the Ocala river, a tributary of the St. Johns, and steamboats traversing the river enter the spring basin, which has an area of several acres. The water is from twenty-five to thirty feet deep and is wonderfully clear, appearing absolutely devoid of color.—Minneapolis Journal.

PLAN TO FIGHT DISEASE

Druggists Will Battle Stomach Trouble in Rushville

The increase of stomach troubles in Rushville has led Johnson's drug store to take effective measures to combat the disease.

They have the local agency for M-i-o-na stomach tablets, and in order to induce people with weak stomach or indigestion to use the remedy offer to supply it with the distinct understanding that money will be refunded in every case where it does not cure.

M-i-o-na is not a mere digestive, but an absolute strengthener and builder-up of the whole digestive tract. If you suffer with headaches, dizziness, palpitation, bad taste in the mouth, nervousness, coated tongue, distress after eating, use M-i-o-na and see how quickly these symptoms of a weak stomach will disappear.

The remedy strengthens the muscular walls of the stomach and increases the flow of gastric juices so that nourishment is extracted from the food and the refuse is expelled without the aid of purgative or laxative medicines.

Remember Johnson's drug store give a guarantee to refund the money unless it cures. They take all the risk, and there is no danger of your losing anything except indigestion when you buy a 50-cent box of M-i-o-na.
